designing with people

By encouraging RCA students to engage with a particular social group in their creative process, the Design for our Future Selves programme aims to demonstrate how people’s lives can be improved through design. Help and advice is offered to students throughout the year:

• Personal tutorials are given to help individual students develop inclusive design processes.
• Development funding is awarded to students to support their projects.
• Students participate in specially-organised user forums to explore and share ideas with such groups as older and disabled people, or parents with young children.

Programme

Welcome to the Design for our Future Selves awards 2007